Analysis:

This second week of January brought a similar pattern of KCNA's China coverage of the first week of the year: in the first three days of the week, only one China related story was published per day, with the number being published increased in the subsequent days.

Themes of interest this week include: the continuation of China's rise on the world stage, domestic developments in the PRC, and government direction of the state. The subject of China's rise has remained a relevant theme over the past weeks, and it made up 7 of the 31 total KCNA China stories this week, illustrating not just China's increasing power and influence in global politics, but North Korean attentiveness to that power. These stories include: China Rejects U.S. Defense Strategy, China Supports Resumption of Palestine-Israel Talks, China Supports Afghan Efforts for National Reconciliation, China-U.S. Confrontation Will Become Acute: Expert, and finally, China Calls for Resolving Iran's Nuclear Issue. The North Korean media rarely seems to come out and explicitly state that China is power to be recognized and respected, but more and more stories in KCNA seem to be detailing China's stark areas of disagreement with the West and specifically the United States. This week in the North Korean press, for example, Chinese spokespeople rejected the United States claim that China's modernization is a dangerous precedent, saying that "the modernization will pose no threat to any country." As China no longer feels the need to put as much faith in the policies of the United States as it has in the past, North Korean media emphasizes China's autonomy, trying in its own way to peel China away from the "stakeholder" position into which the United States has tried to force it.

North Korean stories about China's role in world affairs frequently dwell on the notion of PRC support for smaller peripheral states and causes: In KCNA, China's support for the the resumption of peace talks between Palestine and Israel shows the PRC as neutral arbiter. When China calls for the resolution of Iran's nuclear issues and supports Afghan efforts for reconciliation, it is assumed that China's involvement in world politics is a positive force and a clear counterweight to the United States.

A final story worth note with this theme is the appearance of a Russian expert in the North Korean media predicting the deterioration of the relationship between China and the United States. The KCNA seems increasingly to be using a Chinese media technique, which is to give voice difficult ideas by quoting foreign experts. In this case, the subject was China's predicted resistance to American attempts to halt China's increased influence in Asia. Going further, the expert predicted that China would drive the US out of Asia entirely and refuse its influence over the Persian Gulf area as well. Although the Sino-North Korean relationship is never broached directly, insofar as the KCNA is concerned, China is at all turns depicted as a strong and reasonable partner.

The second most prevalent China-related theme this week in the KCNA is China's development of domestic policy, which was the subject of 11 the 31 China stories published this week. Perhaps the single most noteworthy story in this category is China's launching of another satellite into orbit. As KCNA put it, the satellite would be used for "territorial research, prevention of disasters, protection of ecological environment and other purposes as well as agriculture and forestry."

And again, KCNA details the Chinese government's plans to develop ethnic regions for minority groups.

The final theme of government direction also witnessed increased coverage this week. Although several of these stories fit into the previous category as well, there were a few unique exceptions. The first was that the CPC called for an increased role in party work at universities, an important parallel development for North Korea as youth work is on the upswing in the new year. Furthermore, there were two stories published detailing Hu Jintao's call for purifying the CPC and reducing corruption in general.

A final story that did not necessarily fit into a category but is significant nonetheless was: How Does DPRK Have Such Strong Unity?: Chinese Newspaper. DPRK writers, and certainly the country's Foreign Ministry, are careful readers of the Chinese press, and the summary of Chinese news sources are among the best public sources for reading the modulations in the Sino-North Korean relationship. Last week, we saw how KCNA found a Sina website praising the North Korean people and declaring, supposedly, how lucky citizens of the DPRK were to have Kim Jong Un as their new leader. China's vested interest in the newly established Kim Jong Un regime, and its support for that regime, is being touted in North Korea even as readers in the DPRK are given increased, if still rather small, insights into the media landscape beyond the Yalu and Tumen rivers.

Stamp Exhibition and Memorial Service for Kim Jong Il Held in China

Pyongyang, January 8 (KCNA) -- A stamp exhibition and memorial service on the theme of "The respected General Kim Jong Il will live forever" took place in Beijing on Dec. 29 last year.

On display there were stamps showing leader Kim Jong Il standing together with President Kim Il Sung, dealing with the birth of Kim Jong Il, his start of work at the C. C., Workers' Party of Korea, a series of his visits to China, the exploits performed by him for national reunification and others.

The participants observed three minutes' silence in memory of Kim Jong Il.

Zu Zuwei, chairperson of the Beijing Gulou Philatelic Research Society of China who doubles as chairperson of the Sino-DPRK Stamp Research Society, recalled that since the foundation of the Sino-DPRK Stamp Research Society on February 16, 1999 it has contributed to the development of the Sino-DPRK friendly relations through the exchange of stamps thanks to the deep care and great benevolence of Kim Jong Il.

Expressing sorrow over the demise of Kim Jong Il, close friend of the Chinese people, Zu Zuwei said the society would always hold Kim Jong Il in high esteem as its honorary chairman.

Chinese philatelists would hand down forever the immortal exploits Kim Jong Il performed for the Korean revolution and the development of the Sino-DPRK friendship and his great loving care shown for the society, the chairperson stressed.

Opera "Liang Shanbo and Zhu Yingtai" Successfully Staged in Shandong Province of China

Pyongyang, January 9 (KCNA) -- Artistes of the Phibada Opera Troupe of the DPRK staged closing performances of the opera "Liang Shanbo and Zhu Yingtai" before full house in Qingdao City of Shandong Province on Jan. 6 and 7.

They were watched by a great number of personages and residents of the city and the province.

KCNA FILE NO. 5

The secretary of the Qingdao City Party Committee said it was with irrepressible sorrow that he heard the news that leader Kim Jong Il untimely passed away, adding he would always be alive in the hearts of the Korean and Chinese peoples.

He went on:

The performances successfully given by Korean artistes till their last one made a great contribution to deepening the friendship between the two countries.

The noble ideological and moral traits and artistic skill displayed by Korean artistes greatly influenced the cultural and artistic circles of his province and city.

The vice-mayor of the city noted every scene of the opera drew keen attention, adding that he was deeply moved to watch the Korean artistes perform on the stage despite the sorrow over the great loss.

Their truthful acting, peculiar music, dances and stage decor, etc. mesmerized the whole audience, he stressed.

The vice-director of the Cultural Department of the province said Korean artistes' performances were successful thanks to the initiative and meticulous leadership of Kim Jong Il.

He hoped they would come to his province again with more excellent works in the future.

How Does DPRK Have Such Strong Unity?: Chinese Newspaper

Pyongyang, January 11 (KCNA) -- Chinese Huan Qiu Shibao on Jan. 5 carried an article titled "How Does DPRK Have Such Strong Unity?" The article said:

The memorial service for supreme leader of the DPRK Kim Jong Il held in the DPRK this time offered one an opportunity to know well that he is the most influential man of the socialist country along with President Kim Il Sung.

The memorial service was closely linked with the fascinating personality of the leader.

How does the DPRK have such strong unity?

Firstly, the DPRK is a socialist state.

The Korean and the world people revere the leader who loves his country like his own house and like his own family. This is the first reason why the DPRK has such strong unity.

Secondly, Kim Jong Il devoted all his energies to building a thriving socialist state in the DPRK and serving the people all his life.

They deeply trust socialism and Kim Jong Il as a nation with its own belief. This is the second reason for the strong unity of the DPRK.

Thirdly, there is no gap between the poor and the rich in the DPRK.

The people are better than those of other countries in employment, medical treatment, education, housing conditions and other aspects.

The DPRK has the strongest centripetal force as its people are equal.

They have one and the same feelings as the standard of their living is even. This is the third reason for the strong unity of the DPRK.
